

THE MOUNT REGIS
1974

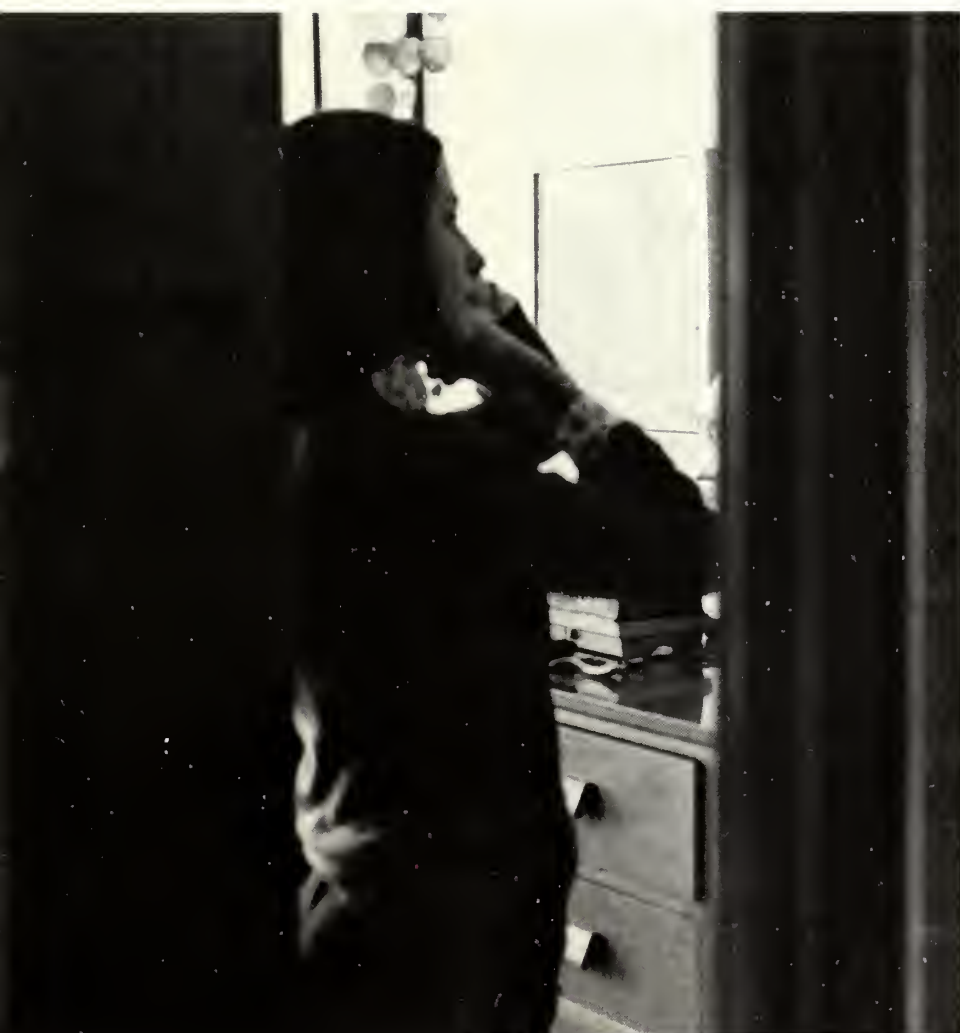

REGIS COLLEGE

Weston, Massachusetts

It began with one golden word — acceptance.
So off you trudged with suitcases, boxes, and barrels full to that glamorous, free-spirited world of college, awaiting your presence at the school on the hill. And here you settled for four years, two years, one year, a month.
And here you ate, slept, attended classes and studied. And here you laughed, cried, hid, became frustrated and bored, but you grew.

Somehow you grew, if only in age.

And with the passage of time
you mentally photographed
your conception of Regis.
And with this picture
you probably will leave or have left.

But in preparing
your film of nostalgia, you came across
many different photographs
of people, places,
and things
which you sifted through in order to define your existence —

Where?

Some you adopted and looked at . . .
often remembering and cherishing the moments as you grew to know and love
these worn but comfortable memoirs;
Some were valuable for a while, or so you thought, but soon they lost their uniqueness — their reality — and so you put these back into their envelopes;
Others you avoided and so you hid these in their sealed packets in the depths of your drawers;

But most you took for granted never bothering to stop and see,
or touch, or listen, or photograph.
Blandly, naively, feeling, finding no emotion. You just never really thought about —

What?

The utility of your education?
The strength that has buoyed your existence so far?
The book you were required to read
last semester?
Your favorite chair in the library?
The shower stall, second from the left,
which jolts you into reality
each morning?

And what's so important about sitting at the same table in the cafeteria — breakfast, lunch and dinner? About using the same toilet stall when necessary? About never feeling exactly right if you're not dressed in your favorite pair of jeans?
Maybe nothing. Don't feel guilty!
You're not the only one. But if there was something there, would you ever be aware of it?

Mechanization, avoidance, disinterest, profiteering — your environment, your nourishment. You see it everywhere. — in politics, in the economy, in international affairs, in society, in that last cigarette you just smoked. And you have accommodated yourself, whether consciously or unconsciously, to this role as every grind of the wheel burrows you deeper and deeper into passivity —
How?

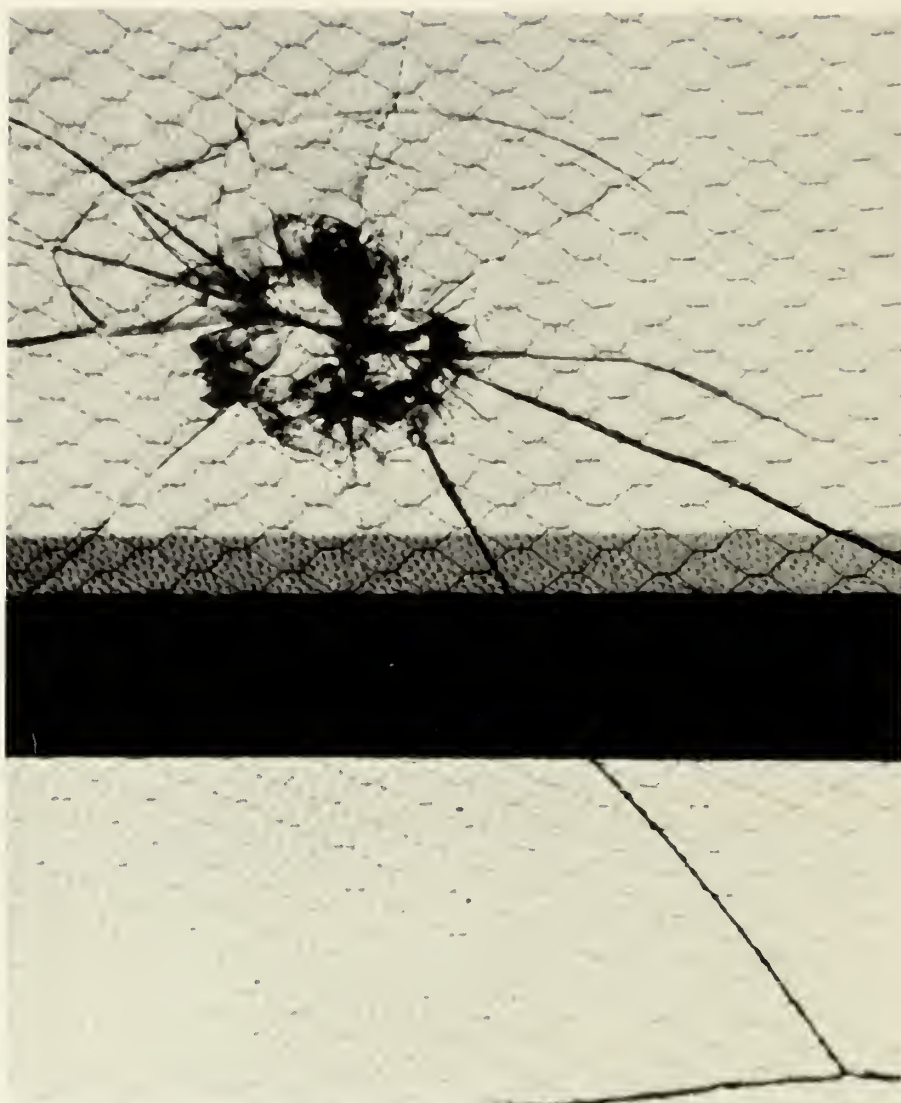

How did you get here?
When did it happen?
Stop the film — stop the action and go back. Retrieve those old rejected photographs and look again.
It will only take a few minutes —
a few years.

How many do you have?
Five, fifty, a hundred pictures?
They're pretty easy to accumulate and even easier to justify — for yourself.
And it happens all the time.
Call it a right to priorities,
a lack of time, a general lack of concern. But there they are.
Can you excuse them?

I wonder who
you could be talking about?
Administrators, faculty,
the people of Weston,
the student body,
me?
It couldn't possibly be me —
Look what I've done
(1, 2, 3, 4, 5)

— Look what you haven't done . . .
Why?

Don't be polite,
Bite in.
Pick it up with your fingers and lick the juice
    that may run down your chin.
It's ready and ripe,
    now,
    whenever you are.
You do not need a knife,
    fork, or spoon,
    or plate
    or napkin
    or tablecloth.
For there is no core
    or stem
    or rind
    or pit
    or seed
    or skin
    to throw away.

ed'u-ca'tion

ed'u-ca'tion (-kā'shŭn), n. [L. educatio. See EDUCATE.]

1. The process of nourishing or physically rearing a child or young animal. Obs.

2. Act or process of educating; specif.: a Obs. The process or manner of training youth for their station in life. b The impartation or acquisition of knowledge, skill, or discipline of character. c Act or process of training by a course of study or discipline; as, a common-school education.

To prepare us for complete living is the function which education has to discharge.

H. Spencer.

3. The training of animals.

4. a The course of instruction and training transmitted in educating; as, a college education. b The totality of the information and qualities acquired through instruction and training, which further the development of an individual physically, mentally, and morally; as, a liberal education.

All things change, yet remain the same. It is we who have changed. We take on new faces, use new grown-up words, adopt new mannerisms, perfect our noticeable imperfections and still we are forced to circle A,B,C,D, or E; still we need No. 2 pencils; still we must face the brick walls of this world. The processing and the packaging revolve continually, but the wrapping is our own.

Innovations come and go, but never are the pressures, anxieties and joys of the student very different. The hopes and dreams of teachers still reach out to their pupils, guiding them through a process which at its least is irritating. An administration still feels the weight of policy-making and must bear the brunt of its impact upon the educational experiments — the students.

Are we all so far removed from members of the medieval university? Not really, though the emphasis may shift from time to time. The educational process — those words have a mechanized ring, suggesting images of classrooms with uniform students, thirty copies of a textbook, caps, gowns and diplomas. Yet the goal of this concrete and abstract process is to initiate a search, to choose a path, to act wisely.

It is a precarious balance we seek, poised between decision and hesitation, stressing neither logic nor emotion. And in striving to maintain that equilibrium our lives will be filled with a series of instant replays. The immediate situation may change and will change, but the facts, the bare essentials, remain the same.

A choice must be made. In most instances it need not be earth-shattering, but in the normal course of events what remains is not so much what we choose, but that we chose. The tool was handed to us; what we make with that tool is left up to the individual imagination.

Whatever we do we must continue to question. In the course of this questioning, assumed to be an inkling of our future success or failure, we begin to reflect upon just what we have gained from our stay here. One important question is that of individual initiative. Have we used it? Have we explored or do we procrastinate and wait until the doors have been shut and opportunity disappears? Have we accepted and recognized that demon, "personal responsibility?" Have we used all the tools at our disposal, or have we refused to employ them?

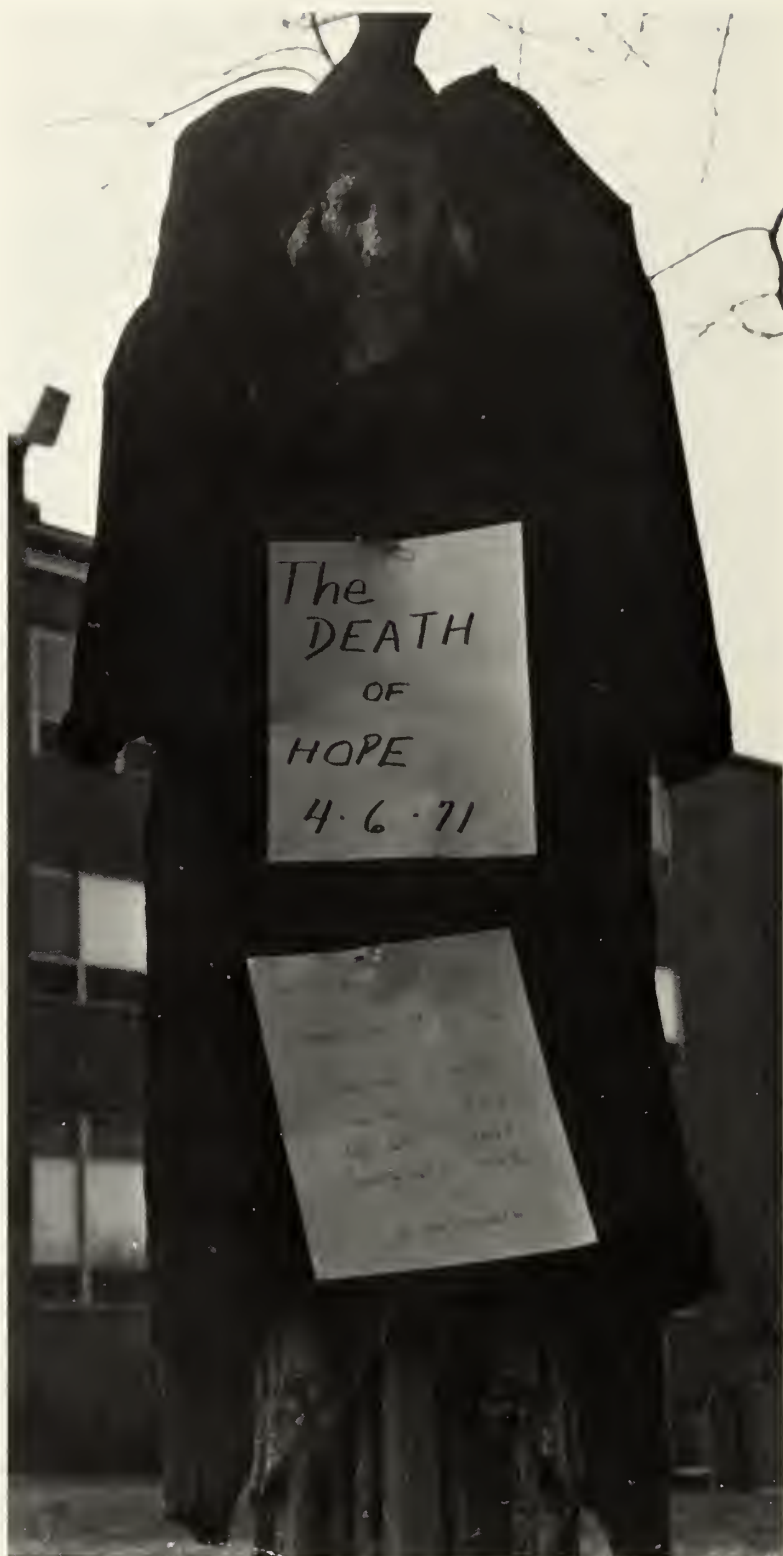

Four years.
Four long, short, timeless, twilight years.
Four years of planning, discovering,
    becoming lost and rediscovering again.
Four years seemed too short on fleeting October afternoons.
Four years was endless
    on wet March mornings,
    when we wore imaginary sackcloths
    ready for our penance of academia.
Four years is a terrible drifting time . . .

And now, in this reflection,
I say we all drifted.
But the drifting was not passive.
It was the most frustrating search.
A search to clear away the illusions
and define the direction.

Although the search is individual and personal,
It has not been lonely.
For a college has faculty,
administration and students,
To join in the search.

A core of students, absorbing, thinking,
growing and creating,
becoming important individuals
— the center of the community.

A tactile administration, molding, directing,
and sometimes constricting,
issuing models while carefully judging
the pulse of the campus.

A faculty who has offered,
if nothing else, older minds
To those willing to open up their questions.
Some of these minds stressed the emotional quest in which the end seemed to be found in ourselves.
Others demanded a structured,
intellectual inquiry
And set us jaunting to the library.

But there were those precious human beings,
Who believed
both were important.
And to those who offered
this gentle, strenuous unity,
We say thank you.
For you have not only alleviated
the restless drifting,
but encouraged us to continue.
To continue to discover, become lost,
and rediscover,
Long after four years have faded.

en·vi'ron·ment

en·vi'ron·ment (ĕn·vī'răn·mĕnt), n. 1. Act of environing; state of being environed.
2. That which environs; the surrounding conditions, influences, or forces, which influence or modify. Specif.: a Biol. The aggregate of all the external conditions and influences affecting the life and development of an organism. b Sociol. The factors surrounding or affecting human beings.

“Good morning fellow Americans! This is WSHI-TV Broadcasting live from high atop the water tower in beautiful downtown Weston. This is Leo Tard, reporting the 8 o’clock news. Now, on the national scene — Tensions run high today as Saga Food Service, 1 Saga Lane, California announced that there will be chicken and French Fries for dinner.

Later this evening students will be anxiously awaiting an address from our President, President Nixon, on the current energy crisis. The general hope here is that the President will make some comment as to how to solve the impending toilet paper shortage on campus. I know I speak for the entire campus when I sincerely say that I hope he will wipe things out.

On the ecology scene — A report submitted to Miles Laboratories yesterday by Throckmorton P. Nurd indicates that Mr. Nurd has found a way of recycling chocolate pudding into gas. Researchers there say the only real problem they’ve encountered so far is that the new process creates — dirty snow.”

“And now for some local news — yes, news right here from our campus!! This morning at 5:45AM a report was phoned into Campus Security concerning a strange light in front of College Hall. As the Campus Security guard drove behind College Hall, sure enough, he encountered the sun, rising. This was noted in the log.

And now, in the way of a follow-up, here’s a news bulletin on the Philatelic Museum robbery which occurred not long ago and shocked the sensibilities of us all. Reports today indicated that several of the missing stamps, missing after the robbery at the museum, were found in the hubcaps of the Regis College station wagon. That’s a sticky one!! Local police report that it was Campus Security’s “stick-to-itiveness” that broke this case.

A report from Mr. DeCamp’s office, our director of Administrative Affairs, today revealed a new program of improvements here on campus for the coming semester. Included in this new program are the painting of curbstones, the placing of reflective tape on trash barrels, and the washing of STOP signs. When questioned about the constant problem of parking on campus, Mr. DeCamp refused comment.

For all those seniors in our audience, let’s commence (hee,hee) with some job opportunities that have been phoned into us. — There are reported opportunities at New England Tractor Trailer Training School which is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Hey! Here’s a note for all you teachers. There is one teaching position available in Swasiland. Applicant need only speak Irdu and be able to travel.”

"Well folks, that's the news. And now it's time for TV-Talk, our on-the-air television guide. Today, tear-drops trickle tremulously as the TV traumas transpire. "As the Channel Turns" — one last moment to live — soapsuds Sanskrit. Easy now, they're only make believe.

Well, Regina had her baby, and Frank decided to sue her while Harry filed for divorce. And Betty's mother was hit by a car on the way home from Jane's father's. And Dorothy practically hemorrhaged while the doctor took a leak — eep!!!

Wasn't that thrilling? Be sure to tune in at 3:00 PM this afternoon for "As the Channel Turns." The time is now 8:15 and it's time for our campus talk-show, "Call on the Coeds." Today we would like to question students concerning the Watergate Affair and how it has affected them.

"Excuse me, Miss. What do you think of the Watergate Affair?" "Well, I think it's disgusting that Americans can't get decent plumbers when they really need them. Do you know what I mean?" "Yes, yes that's fine. But what about the great Americans involved?" "Yes, I think there were some great Americans involved." "Thank you very much. Now let's interview someone else. Miss, what are your thoughts on the Watergate Affair?"

"Well, I have to hurry, I have yoga at nine o'clock. But I think Mr. Watergate should have been more careful, after all he must have known there'd be a big convention in town that weekend."

"Thank you very much. That was just a random sampling of how our campus coeds feel about a very important national affair."

"In our Campus Briefs this morning we find that the student government is about to propose a new system of parking tickets whereby tickets would be issued to cars with even-numbered license plates on even-numbered days and to odd-numbered plates on odd days. The rationale behind this being that cars on an off-day would not be able to get gas to move.

Reports from the library today indicate that the new policy will be to check out books for a four week instead of a two week period. This will mean that tracking down that book you need this week will be more of a challenge!!

On our social weekend calendar, we are proud to announce that tickets are still going fast for our upcoming Gene Pitney Concert. And yes, folks, he will sing his new song, "Mecca." Tea and sympathy will be served.

That concludes our morning report. Please stay tuned for more fine programming — and of course, Jim Shorts with the news at noon. And remember — let's make it a good day!!!!"

Life is a circus and we are all in the freak show!!

*A cycle of symbiosis, September to June
in the same organism, Living as antibodies,
defending and attacking —
An interaction of warring units, unemotional —
All merely functioning pawns
to the duty of the whole, Unwittingly engulfing
the unacceptable,
As from the life blood is filtered
both nutrients and impurities,
As diversified tissues lay to waste,
matter not good enough
to sustain the quality of life.*

*For the cycle needs death.
In the death are strain and hope.
The throes are over.
The pain dulls to an ache.*

For the growing pains are real.*

*Now the calm of the cycle,

To churn and agitate
the lethargy of non-being.*

class

class (kläs; see Pron., § 83), n. [F. classe, fr. L. classis class, collection, fleet; akin to L. calare to call, summon. See CLAIM.] 1. Rom. Hist. Any of the six divisions into which the Roman people were divided under the constitution ascribed to Servius Tullius. Five were formed according to property, each to furnish a certain number of equipped centuries to the army, while the sixth consisted of those not having property enough to warrant military equipment. Cf. TRIBE. 2. A group of individuals ranked together as possessing common characteristics or as having the same status; as, the educated class; the middle or working classes. 3. Hence, the system comprising such social groups; caste; also, social rank, esp. high rank; as, the feeling of class. 4. A group of persons, things, qualities, or activities, having common characteristics or attributes; a set; a kind, description, species, or variety. 8. Educ. a A course. Archaic. b A body of students meeting regularly to study the same subject, or to attend lectures or recitations; as, a mathematics or Bible class. c The period during which such a body meets. d In the United States, a body of students whose year of graduation from an institution is the same; as, the first-year class.

Class — a word we use everyday, whether it be at ten o'clock or the mode of travel by which our mail reaches us. It seems to indicate much more than one particular unit of students. Class seems more a measure of something extra, something sought after and hard to define. Almost charismatic in nature, it is not limited by rank or means.

We each seek class in our own way. Here, we agonize through classes, physical units of learning and seek to find ourselves as members of a particular class — graduated steps which lead us from a fresh exuberance to a more careful and studied approach to life.

Our ultimate hope is to acquire some small amount of class — a little polish to blunt the rough edges and bring out the shine that we knew was there all the time. Each member of the campus community has found or is finding a different way to do just that, for class involves style, something deliciously personal, no matter what the social, economic, political or intellectual class each is associated with.

Class, whether a tangible unit or an abstract quality, implies the formation of bonds and a pledge of commitment — to the friends who have withstood the trials and joys that friendship always knows, to the teachers who have pledged a commitment to help us along our road, no matter what the pace, to the parents who stuck with our growing pains gambling for success against tremendous odds, and most of all, class entails a commitment to being a woman, to the body and mind that we live in each day despite the test of endurance and self-respect that class means.

No matter how we view class, it is an important part of the Regis community and is a concept we must all learn to be comfortable with. Consider it carefully. Each may find herself closer to an evaluation of what it means to be here.

*So here I am, in the middle way,
having had twenty years —
Twenty years largely wasted,
the years of l'entre deux guerres.*

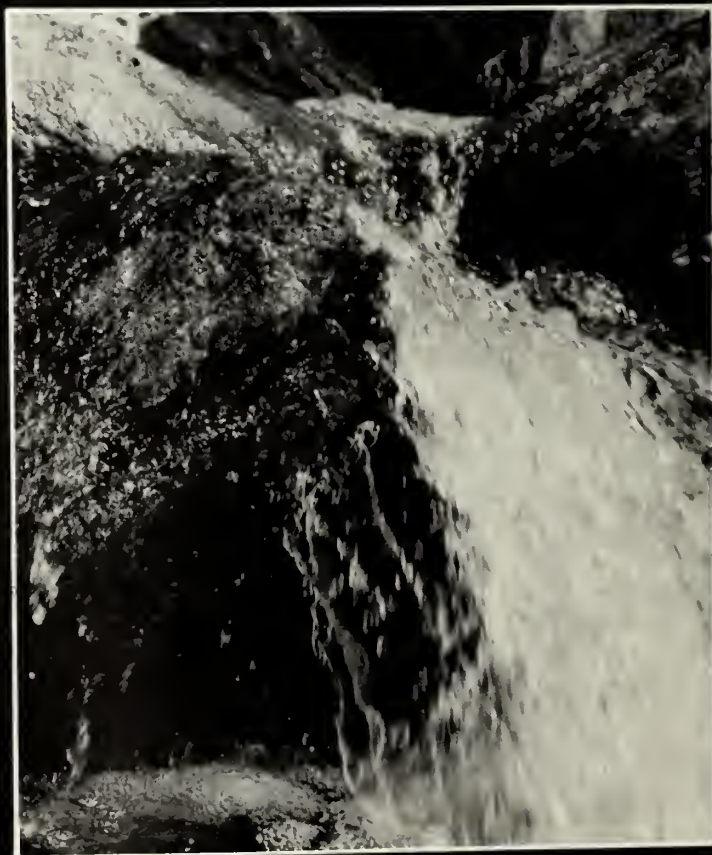

*Trying to learn to use words,
and every attempt
Is a wholly new start,
and a different kind of failure
Because one has only learnt to get the better of words
For the thing one no longer has to say, or the way in which
One is no longer disposed to say it.*

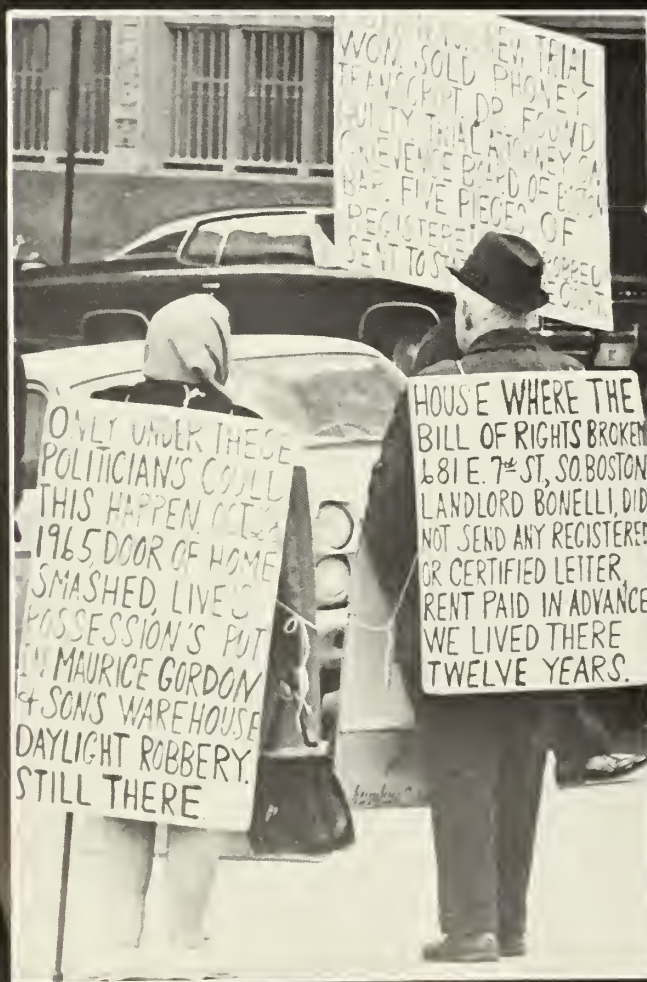

*And so each venture
Is a new beginning, a raid
on the inarticulate
With shabby equipment always deteriorating
In the general mess of imprecision
of feeling,

*And what there is to conquer
By strength and submission, has already been discovered
Once or twice, or several times, by men whom one cannot hope
To emulate — but there is no competition —*

*There is only the fight to recover
what has been lost
And found and lost again and again: and now,
under conditions
That seem unpropitious. But perhaps neither gain nor loss.
For us, there is only the trying.
The rest is not our business.*

*Home is where one starts from.
As we grow older
The world becomes stranger,
the pattern more complicated
Of dead and living. Not the intense moment
Isolated, with no before and after,
But a lifetime burning in every
moment
And not the lifetime of one man
only
But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.*

*There is a time for the evening under starlight,
A time for the evening under lamplight
(The evening with the photograph album).*

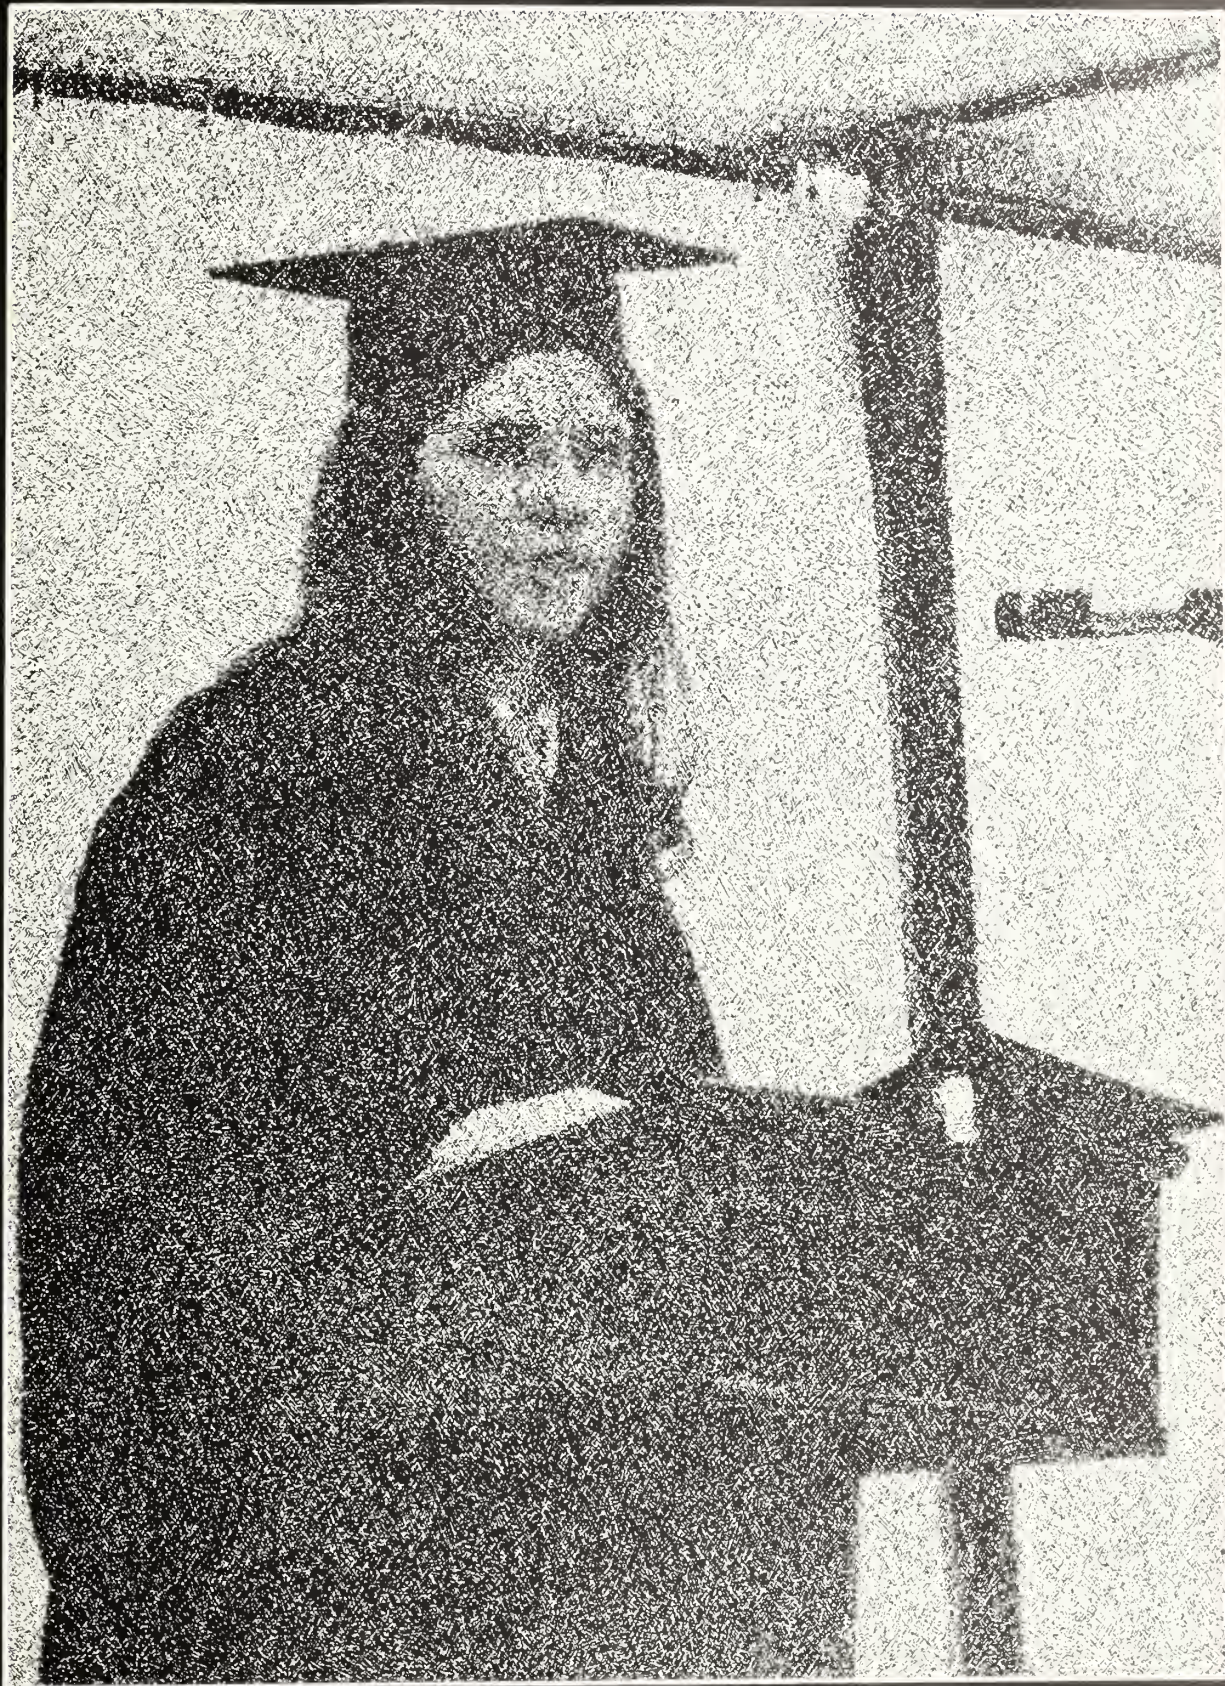

*Love is most nearly itself
When here and now cease to matter.
Old men ought to be explorers
Here and there does not matter.*

*We must be still and still moving
Into another intensity
For a further union,
a deeper communion
Through the dark cold
and the empty desolation,
The wave cry,
the wind cry,
the vast waters
Of the petrel and the porpoise.*

In my end is my beginning.

Is a wholly new start, and a different kind of failure
Because one has only learnt to get the better of words
For the thing one no longer has to say, or the way in which One is no longer disposed to say it. And so each venture
Is a new beginning, a raid on the inarticulate
With shabby equipment always deteriorating
In the general mess of imprecision of feeling, Undisciplined squads of emotion. And what there is to conquer
By strength and submission, has already been discovered
Once or twice, or several times, by men whom one cannot
hope
To emulate — but there is no competition —
There is only the fight to recover what has been lost
And found and lost again and again; and now, under conditions
That seem unpropitious. But perhaps neither gain nor loss.
For us, there is only the trying. The rest is not our business.*

*Home is where one starts from. As we grow older
The world becomes stranger, the pattern more complicated
Of dead and living. Not the intense moment
Isolated, with no before and after,
But a lifetime burning in every moment
And not the lifetime of one man only
But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.
There is a time for the evening under starlight,
A time for the evening under lamplight
(The evening with the photograph album).
Love is most nearly itself
When here and now cease to matter.
Old men ought to be explorers
Here and there does not matter
We must be still and still moving
Into another intensity
For a further union, a deeper communion
Through the dark cold and the empty desolation,
The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters
Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.*

T.S. Eliot

P. S. Hey, you guys!

Now that this book is all finished, we just want to let you know that we laughed until we cried doing this thing. But, the important thing is that we did it for you, not just for us. It was nothing but a pile of pictures and funny typed words until now anyway. We tried very hard to get all of you represented here somehow or another and now we suppose you won't even read it or connect things until someday when you have nothing better to do than read the yearbook. But that's all right. What matters is that you do read it, not just look at it. This isn't just a yearbook or an annual. It's a living, breathing experience that happened to find everybody in the same place at about the same time. It's not as easy as throwing pictures on a page, because that's not what we're out to do here.

Wait a minute, you try it. Go over the book page by page, and make your own mental adjustments and additions . . . it wasn't as easy as you thought — right? O.K. Thanks. Thanks a lot. We just wanted to get that across to you and help you to appreciate it because, afterall, it's a gift from us to you.
